How this catalog works

Each World Tomorrow program has been indexed by transcribing the first few sentences of the main body of the program. The main body of the program is that portion that begins after the World Tomorrow introduction. This method was selected because some programs contained a prologue before the World Tomorrow introduction, and some programs did not. In addition, some of the actual recordings used for these disks had portions of the prologue missing, therefore it would not have been possible to fully index these programs to identify duplicates using another method.

Technical Notices

These DVDs are recorded on DVD-R disks and will play on most TV DVD players, macintosh systems with a DVD-ROM drive, and some PC-based DVD players. However, in testing these DVDs, we experienced the most compatibility problems with PC-based systems. In addition, the best video quality for viewing these DVDs was achieved with using a TV-based DVD player. Therefore, we highly recommend viewing these DVDs on a television, and not on a computer.

If you do not have a DVD player connected to your TV, we have tested each disk with the APEX brand of DVD players available at many local stores, including Wal-Mart. The entry-level APEX DVD player at Wal-Mart costs approximately $68.

Cost of DVDs

We must have a local electronics store duplicate these disks because each disk takes approximately 1.5 hours to duplicate and we do not have the resources to duplicate these disks in large numbers. For example, there are 23 disks listed here, so an entire set of the DVDs would take approximately 34 hours to duplicate per set. We simply do not have the resources to provide the service of duplicating these disks at this time.

The company that duplicates these disks charges us $20 per DVD. This is a very, very good price compared to other quotes ($35-50 each) we received. We also ask an additional $5 per DVD to cover the shipping and handling costs to mail these disks, as well as help with the costs of making the original master disks and other operational costs of the HWA Library. So please send $25 per DVD payable to the HWA Library, PO Box 6025, Woodridge, IL 60517. Please allow 2-3 weeks for delivery.
